Product Description

Learning to write letterforms requires the mastery of a series of different processes: motor, cognitive and perceptual. Motor processes involve learning to hold the writing implement in a comfortable and efficient way for writing; the cognitive ones lead to understanding the different lines which make up the letters; the perceptual ones help the child to create an internal representation of each letterform, prior to performing the right movement sequences to write them down.

Giant Peg Boards provide initial experience in these three areas in a stepped progression which reflects the natural development of the child. It achieves continuity by offering exercises of increasing complexity that stimulate the development of writing skills through the copying of patterns which are fundamental to handwriting.
